The statutes, regulations, and case law governing workplace conduct are complex. However, only a portion of these rules actually result in material legal liability for your business clients. Attorney who do not practice employment law on a daily basis don't need to know all the laws, only the top sources of legal liability for Rhode Island companies.

Presenter Chip Muller, Esq., advises companies on best practices to comply with employment laws governing the workplace. However, the bulk of his practice is litigation against companies on behalf of employees. In this two hour presentation, he will teach the main sources of corporate liability and the "weak links" in corporate advice and management practices. Chip will provide an overview of the major state and federal statutes and case law affecting companies in Rhode Island and will highlight the main sources of material liability for Rhode Island companies. He will give clear, practical tips attorneys can use to help their clients improve employment law compliance and reduce legal liability
