As law firms become more dependent upon technology solutions that are connected to the internet, how can you trust anything when we read about daily scams and security threats?

The key is to think like a hacker. At this informative program, you will learn:

- What motivates a hacker and what are the vulnerabilities a hacker is looking for?
- Identify and understand the threats entering your network:
  - What is the difference between a virus, malware and phishing attacks?
  - Examples of social engineering and fraudulent wire transfer schemes will be reviewed in depth.
- What is the dark web and how do hackers use it to sell your private information (like your passwords)?
- How to safeguard your client data and network against an attack.
  - Legal document transfers: How to share client information via the cloud safely.
- The dangers on your desk: threats are not just in the cloud! Your desks pose risks too, as well as unencrypted thumb drives, smart devices, laptops and poor passwords. A review of a typical work environment and its various vulnerabilities will help you protect your information.
- The specific steps of what to do immediately if you just wired funds to a fraudster.
- The ethics of the aftermath of a cyber-attack or wire transfer to a hacker:
  - What are your obligations under the law and ethically?
  - Who do you contact?
  - How do you inform your clients that their data has been compromised?

If you understand what motivates a hacker and what they are looking for, then you can put measures into place to safeguard your firm's network and your client's data. Don't delay, sign up today.
